Dear Mona Dougherty, John Short and Robert Klamt,

I am very concerned about using treated waste water in a manner where it could end up in the Russian River during the summer because of incidental runoff. The impact of spreading this treated waste water that contains many chemicals and heavy metals into the river environment is cause for much concern. I urge you to delay permitting this until either the impacts have been thoroughly determined to be benign or the water is sufficiently treated to remove the potential dangers. There is no good justification for allowing incidental runoff at this time.
